WHAT will be a good thing for a wedding present?

There are only three thousand answers to this question. Deciding the question of what to give the bride is almost as hard for a woman as determining whether to get monsignori gloves with ninety buttons, that come to her ears, or to wear low-necked ones that will give her arms a shock.

When Tom drops in to get something for Bob he has only one idea or two on the subject, floating drowsily around in a sea of ignorance. The idea is generally a dressing-case or a drinking-flask, or a cigarette-holder, or some other tremendously useful household utensil. Then the suave man behind the show-case slaughters the idea in its innocent youthfulness.

Aristocratic money, it is in response to the thought of furnishing a view large enough to meet that he orders a neat case of silver, lined with gold, very neat.

If the father of the bride or the groom is wealthy his wedding present is generally looked for in the shape of a signed check, or a handsome, thoroughly furnished house. Both are very suitable wedding presents. The groom's own present to the bride is, where wealth permits, some costly jewelry.

Aristocratic money, it is in response to the thought of furnishing a view large enough to meet that he orders a neat case of silver, lined with gold, very neat.

Another tax on the rich groom at a swell wedding is the tax on the bride's handmaid. The bride's handmaid is usually a girl who has been adopted by a regular thing in New York, but in England it is as much a matter of course as signing the marriage register.

One of letters came to THE WORLD office from housekeepers who have been experimenting with the receipts given for furnishing a good dinner for four people at the astonishingly moderate cost of $1. It seems to be the most popular feature of the most popular evening paper in the city. To print all the letters of advice, commendation and sometimes complaint received would be to exclude everything else.

The letters of advice come from women who think they can provide a better bill of fare at a small cost than the accomplished chef who supplies THE WORLD, with several years' experience at a leading hotel at his back. The letters of complaint have so far come from two sources: First, people who imagined that they could go to any first-class restaurant and order four portions of everything mentioned in THE WORLD's bill of fare and get away with $1.00, including tip to the waiter. This is ridiculous. The dollar dinner for four is not intended for the unfortunate people compelled to feed at restaurants, and who must necessarily pay for a great many things besides the actual cost of the food they consume. Nor does it take a person accustomed to patronizing good restaurants to find out that one portion is usually sufficient for two people, and that to order more than three portions for four people is simply waste. But THE WORLD's bill of fare has nothing to do with restaurant prices. It is prepared for thrifty housekeepers who want to grow their husbands into good, substantial dinner when his day's work is done, but are compelled to practice close domestic economy. Read this letter:

To the Editor of THE WORLD:—I have been trying your "dollar dinner for four." Some days they come to a few cents under and some to a few cents over than $1. Last Saturday it was exactly $1. You don't know how much you take off of the housewife's mind by furnishing her with a bill of fare for dinner. Nor, Saturday morning, when she goes to any one of the restaurants and it's hard to believe that it cost so little. But here is just what I paid:

One pound of mutton, 15c.
Leg of mutton for roasting, 40c.
Cabbage, 10c.
Carrots, 10c.
Potatoes, 10c.
Coffee, 10c.
Total, $1.00.

I did not put down cheese, because none of us care for it. Please keep up the bill of fare, Mrs. J. W.
